PROOF SETS: THE PERFECT GIFT AND A COLLECTOR'S FAVORITE

Originally struck to test the dies, "specimen" or proof coins were used as gifts to visiting royalty and other dignitaries and were produced in very limited quantities.

In 1858, U.S. proof coins were first offered for sale to the public and became very much in demand because of their unique appearance. Specially prepared blanks and dies are used for proof coins, and each coin is struck at least twice to highlight every detail of the design. The overall effect is to produce coins of unmatched quality and beauty.

This fascination with proof coins continues, and they remain a solid foundation for many collections. As a gift, they'll impress even the most discerning on your list.

AMERICAN EAGLE PROOF COINS

GOLD PROOF EAGLE COINS

"The best coin that has been struck for 200 years." That's how President Theodore Roosevelt described the 1907 20-dollar gold piece designed by world-renowned sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens. That work of art is the basis for the 1996 American Eagle Proof Gold Coins.

These masterpieces epitomize the United States Mint's dedication to produce the finest coins in the world. Coin blanks are hand-fed into presses fitted with highly polished dies. Each coin is struck at least twice to ensure great detail. All undergo a meticulous, gloved-hand inspection.

The "Walking Liberty" originally appeared on a half-dollar in 1916. Created by A.A. Weinman, a protege of sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens, the design is considered a classic in American numismatics.

SMITHSONIAN 150TH ANNIVERSARY COMMEMORATIVE COINS

In 1838, 104,960 gold sovereigns arrived in America. They were a gift to our country from the estate of James Smithson, an Englishman who never set foot in America. His will stipulated that the money was to be used to create "an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge..." The United States Mint melted down the sovereigns and used the gold to create Goddess of Liberty 10-Dollar Gold Coins. In 1846, these U.S. minted coins helped finance the Smithsonian Institution.

One hundred-fifty years later, you can celebrate this national treasure with gold and silver coins from the United States Mint.

A portion of the proceeds from the sale of these coins and the Smithsonian Coin jewelry will help the Smithsonian expand and enhance its collection. And a percentage of the proceeds will go directly to the National Numismatic Collection for acquisitions, new displays and other improvements.
